

FACTS ABOUT WAYNE COUNTY
 Wayne County was originally created in 1796 as part of the federal lands known as the Northwest Territory which was managed at that time by appointed governor Major General Arthur St. Clair. The Northwest Territory encompassed a vast amount of land area east of the Mississippi River, between the Great Lakes and the Ohio River, which eventually became the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. Wayne County was named after Major General "Mad" Anthony Wayne, Revolutionary War hero who later became General of the U.S. Army in 1794 who was also the victor of the Battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794. Wayne County was established in 1808 with Wooster City as the county seat and became organized as one of the foremost agricultural counties in the world.

Wayne County has three cities: Wooster, Orrville and Rittman; twelve incorporated villages and sixteen townships within its boundaries providing excellent educational facilities. At the college level, the College of Wooster is nationally acclaimed; the University of Akron in Wooster is highly admired for its academic credentials. Several High Schools and Elementary Schools offer secondary and primary education at superior levels. The Wayne County Schools Career Center in Smithville provides highly skilled and technical courses leading to a variety of vocational opportunities for teenagers and adults. The state approved Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC), headquartered in Wooster is recognized as one of the foremost research institutions in the world.
